For more "in depth" tutorials, you can refer to our tutorials section. However, if you are just interested to know how to make a photo using these steps, you can try below instructions. "The Blend tool can be used to fill either overlapping or non-overlapping areas, and even lend a gradient of your choice. If you're going for a strong grunge look, you can try to use the Gradient overlay to create a grungy pattern, but be warned that light areas will end up looking a bit white. The Gradient Overlay tool also allows you to apply a pattern of your choice to an image. If you're trying to make a graduated background look, keep the Gradient Overlay tool close by -- this tool can help you perfectly mimic the look of chalkboard paint you can get at your local Home Depot. Neat." "The Gradient Wand tool allows you to apply a gradient to any area on an image. This will make a gradient from one side to the other side of the image, depending on how steep the gradient is set. If it's not steep enough, you may end up with a gradient that turns too dark. This is where you can choose an adjustment layer if you need to correct this problem. You can try to use a darker gradient for sky, and a lighter gradient for the land. 933d7f57e6
